

How To Find A Job

www.clairedeaconcoaching.co.uk

Mindset

It is easy to jump into finding a job based on what you have always done and what people say you are good at. Take a few moments to meditate on what you actually want. Be sure to be truthful about this as any unconscious beliefs or patterns could get in the way of what is meant for you.

Be Seen

If you are on LinkedIn, change your status to "open to work" and get a professional to look over your CV. It needs to contain key words that relate to the job you are seeking, not just the jobs you have done to date. Once you have those key words, make sure they also appear on LinkedIn. Us recruiters firstly search on key words so don't underestimate them!

Be Proactive

LinkedIn Jobs, Indeed and all other job boards are great . . . but, a lot of roles are not advertised. Particularly the more senior ones. Research companies and industries that you love. Go onto their websites and look at the team/staff page. See if you can see any gaps in their current team where you could fit in! Contact the Founder or the HR Director and tell them why they need you!

Collaborate

Team up with a recruiter or a headhunter, alongside doing your own, proactive job search. They will be able to open doors for you and they get a commission (around 15-20% of your salary) if they find you a job.

www.clairedeaconcoaching.co.uk

